INTRODUCTION

For secure self-custody, bitcoiners must create seed phrases by generating entropy offline rather than trusting computer/hardware random number generators.

With a pair of d8 dice and this booklet, sufficient offline entropy can be generated quickly and easily.

Eleven words for a 12-word seed, twenty-three for a 24-word seed. The final word is always a checksum computed by your hardware wallet, never drawn by hand – see The Checksum Step.

WHAT YOU NEED

- This booklet
- Some pen and paper
- A pair of distinguishable d8 (eight-sided) dice – one always White, one always Black, never swapped mid-process
- A checksum-capable hardware wallet or offline BIP39 tool

HOW IT WORKS

1. Turn to the CARD SELECT table on page 1.
2. Roll both dice. Read White openly, 1-8. Read Black only as a pair: 1/2, 3/4, 5/6, or 7/8.
3. Cross White against the Black-pair on the table to get a card number, 1-32. Turn to that card. For example, if you rolled White 3 and Black 6, you land on card 11, so you turn to that page.
4. Roll both dice again. White gives the row, 1-8; Black gives the column, 1-8.
5. Read the word at that row/column and write it down. For example, on Card 1, White 6 and Black 6 give you row 6, column 6 – the word there is REDUCE.
6. Repeat from step 2. Do this 11 times for a 12-word seed, or 23 times for a 24-word seed.
7. Feed your drawn words into your hardware wallet (or an offline BIP39 tool) to get the valid final checksum word. Never hand-pick, guess, or re-roll it yourself. Do this air-gapped, on a device that has never touched the internet with this seed.
8. Enjoy your new seed.

THE CHECKSUM STEP

These pages give you raw entropy only, never a finished mnemonic. In BIP39 the final word encodes a checksum over every word before it – draw all 12 (or 24) words independently and the phrase is only valid about 1 time in 16 (1 in 256 for 24 words). So: draw 11 or 23 words with this booklet, then let your hardware wallet or an offline tool compute the valid final word. Never hand-pick, guess, or re-roll it yourself.

Released under CC0 1.0 – print, fork, adapt, share freely. Fonts under SIL OFL. Not financial advice. Use at your own risk.

WHY THE BLACK AND WHITE ARE NOT INTERCHANGEABLE VALUES

White and Black each roll twice per word, but they mean two different things each time – a card number on the first roll, a row/column on the second. Keep their identity fixed.

Repeat, you must NEVER swap which die is White and which is Black mid-process. If you do, you collapse two distinct outcomes into one, which breaks the uniform 1-in-2048 odds and non-linearly COMPROMISES your entropy, making your final outputs insecure and unusable.

The bit math: two d8 give 6 bits – 64 outcomes, one shy of 2048. So each word costs two rolls of the same pair. Roll one narrows 2048 words to 1 of 32 cards, using White's full 8 values (3 bits) and Black collapsed into 4 pairs (2 bits) – 5 bits. Roll two picks the exact cell on that card, using White as row and Black as column, full 8×8 – 6 bits. $5 + 6 = 11$ bits = 1-in-2048, exactly uniform, no modulo bias – the same two dice doing double duty instead of needing a jar, tickets, or a third randomness source.

WHY 32 CARDS WITH 64 WORDS EACH

There are 2048 words in the BIP39 list used to generate every English seed phrase. 32 cards of 64 words each is the cleanest way to cover all 2048 with a booklet you can actually print and flip through – not so many pages it's a chore, not so few words per page that you'd still need a stack of loose pieces.

There are pre-existing products that sell 1024 or 2048 pieces which work fine, but it's impractical to handcraft or mark that many individual pieces yourself.

A pair of d8 dice already gives you 64 unique outputs on a grid, so this booklet only needed 32 pages to cover the same 2048 words. And because it's bound as a booklet instead of loose tickets or tablets, there's nothing to lose track of at all – just this book and two d8 dice.
